BEE GEE WINS CLOSE ONE FROM BEAVERS, 30 TO 29

Foul Shooting Is Above Par; Locals Making Eight of Ten Free Tosses; Yoder Hits Again

For the second time this season the Falcons downed the Bluffton cagers scoring a 30-29 win Saturday night.

The first fracas was not nearly so close, the Falcons having the advantage of the home floor, and the Beavers were prohibited from using freshmen while in this game freshmen were not barred.

The smaller gym kept the score down and relatively close. The half ended 18-17 for Bluffton.

Early in the second half Bee Gee got ahead, only to have the score tied at 29 all. With only two minutes remaining Yoder sank a free toss and Bee Gee strategically played safe, holding the one point margin for a victory.

Yoder was high scorer for the Falcons with a total of nine points. Schafer was next with six.

Foul shooting was unusual, eight being caged from ten attempts. Schafer making four out of four tries; Yoder three out of three; Shupe one out of two, and Orley Thomas missing one.

Very little sensational ball was demonstrated, yet Landis was pleased to win after losing the tough contest Thursday to Heidelberg.

Nine New Five Brothers

The role of neophytism became a pleasant reminiscence for nine men, who were recently given the third degree by the Five Brothers at their fraternity house on West Wooster Street. The nine new Five Brothers are:

Virden Crawford, Kenton; James Deter, North Baltimore; Arthur Fish, Delta; Francis Try, Fostoria; Darvan Moosman, Waterville; Ford Murray, Liberty Center; Allen Myers, Tiffin; Oscar Penchef, Toledo; Carl Stephens, Oakwood.

Extensive plans were made at that time for the welcoming of the new Five Brother neophytes at the next meeting.

A VOTE OF THANKS

The Key Staff wishes to extend a vote of thanks to the student body and the faculty for the hearty cooperation which was given last week during the taking of the pictures for the Key. We were very well pleased with the representation in the various groups, and we are sure it will aid in the publishing of a better year book.

We have but one other favor to ask and this concerns not all the students, but only those who have not yet completed the payments on their book. We are sure that most of you want a book and are merely neglecting this matter, which, if considered, would make it possible for the Staff to plan further ahead. We hope that you will neglect this item no longer.

Bee Gee Students And Teachers Go To Toledo

Another of the series of Town Hall programs, featuring Vladimir Horowitz, noted pianist, was given Sunday, Feb. 5 at the Civic Auditorium, Toledo.

Those attending from the Music Department were: Mr. and Mrs. Fauley, Miss Hall, Miss Marble, Miss Sams, Miss Baker, Mr. Witters, and Mr. Donald Armstrong.

The last of this series of programs will be given on March 5 at which the Don Cosack Male Chorus will appear. They are a very outstanding group of singers and promise to afford great interest to music lovers. Tickets will be available on week previous.

New Sorority at Bee Gee

The Phratra Sorority has been organized to create and foster friendship between two-year and four-year students. The charter members reside at Williams Hall, but it is hoped that the group will soon include numbers representative of the whole college. The advisors are Miss Nina Beattie and Miss Elsie Lorenz. The members are Edith Morehead, Wanita Gafner, Mildred Potter, Marie Mittlestead, Eleanor Schuman, and Julianna Timar (now an alumna). The sorority is for two-year and four-year students in the College of Education. Officers are: president, Mildred Potter; vice-president, Marie Mittlestead; secretary, Wanita Gafner; treasurer, Edith Morehead; sergeant-at-arms, Eleanor Schuman. Congratulations and best wishes for the future-Phratra!

UNDERGRADUATES SEEK RIGHT TO VOTE IN STATE

Governor White Is Interviewed By Students of Three Ohio Colleges

Because 250 eligible voters of Oberlin college were denied the right to vote because of the registration requirements of Ohio, petitions are now circulating through 40 colleges in the state in an attempt to put a bill through the state legislature to grant eligible student voters the right to vote.

Presidents Wilkins of Oberlin, Soper of Ohio Wesleyan, and Shaw of Denison, accompanied by Curtis Anderson, Clayton Herrick, and Tom Craig, heads of the student government associations of their respective schools, recently lunched with Governor George White at the executive mansion in Columbus, where they discussed the petition.

Anderson discussed the matter with the president of the student senate at Ohio State, and reported that the latter's opinion was favorable. Meanwhile, President Wilkins went over the situation with Lieutenant Governor Charles Sawyer, and Democratic floor leader Keith Lawrence, who seemed impressed by its possibilities. It is hoped that legislation will be taken in the near future to facilitate student voting.

A rough draft of the proposed addition to Sec. 4785 of the election laws of the state of Ohio has been drawn up. It states that any person "in attendance as student at any institution of learning; may apply in writing to the County Board of Elections for blanks or printed forms; which, when properly filled out in the presence of an official authorized by law to administer oaths, within or without the state; and when properly sealed, stamped, and mailed by registered mail by the official authorized by law to administer oaths, shall constitute the registration of that person, and shall be the affidavits whereby the registrar, or clerk in the office of the County Board of Elections, shall add the applicant's name to the roll of eligible voters."—Denisonian.

Editorial

John Langdon-Davies, who spoke last Tuesday evening, seems to have created on the campus quite a stir. Several who heard him declared him to be the "best they had ever heard" while others bemoaned his superficiality. We agree that Mr. Langdon-Davies gave a great speech, and we heartily agree with everything he said.

Particularly do we agree that but few—lamentably few—are able to keep from being bored while alone. We think that is apparent here in Bee Gee to anyone who is observant.

Education should do this for an individual if it never does anything else: it should make his thought-life interesting enough that he never would feel alone. We conceive him to be the most interesting person who thinks the most interesting thoughts.

St. Valentine's Day Tuesday aroused no attention from the student body. Other colleges of the "up and at-'em" type such as Otterbein entertained the student body with a lovely Valentine Dance. We believe Bee Gee should soon have the last sad rites chanted over her.

Spanish Program Planned for Foreign Language Club

Would you like to learn something about Spain—her language and her people? Then join the group which attends the Foreign Language club. The people of the Spanish department have planned an interesting and live program for the next meeting, Thursday, February 16. The meeting will be held at 4 o'clock in Room 103A.

You need not be enrolled in any foreign language class to be admitted to any meeting of the Foreign Language club. Interest and desire to learn something new are the only requirements. Come out and join us, Thursday at 4.

"LAME DUCK" DIES

For ten years Senator Norris, a Republican insurgent, has been shooting at the Congressional "lame duck." Six times his amendment for the abolition of the lame duck session passed the Senate. Twice it win in the House. It was not until last March, however, that Congress got together and started shooting from both barrels. With the first obstacle out of the way the issue went to the States, where a necessary three-quarters of them had to ratify that this 20th Amendment might become a part of the Constitution.

Many State Legislatures, who were then in session, quickly gave their consent. Nearly a year later or to be more exact, on the 19th day of January the Legislature of North Dakota and Tennessee ratified this amendment, being the 32nd and 33rd to do so. The next day Idaho and New Mexico added their signatures making the 34th and 35th. Then the race begin. Each of the remaining states, who had not yet ratified, wanted the honor of being the 36th state to do so. Our own State of Ohio was in the race, so were Utah and Georgia, with Massachusetts the favorite because of her time advantage of one hour. But out of a clear sky there came a dark horse. In Jefferson City, Missouri, members of the General Assembly were secretly telephoned to be on hand at 10:00 A. M.; three hours before the Massachusetts legislators were to meet. In a minutes time the Amendment was ratified and Missouri sneaked away with the honor of being the State whose ratification made the 20th amendment a part of the Constitution.

The new Amendment will go into force on October 15th of this year. It abolishes the "lame duck" session of Congress, advances the Presidential Inauguration from March 4th to January 20th, and states that Congress is to meet every year on January 3rd. In commenting upon his own amendment, Senator Norris says—

"In my judgment this amendment is a great step toward placing the control of the Government in the hands of the chosen representatives of the people. By moving up the dates on which the President, Vice-President, and members of Congress will enter upon their duties, the desires of the American citizens as expressed at the polls in November can be answered in a few weeks instead of thirteen months."

The students of Arizona State Teachers college, when asked to give a definition of Technocracy—one of the latest and most widely discussed topics—gave these answers:

1. "Technocracy? Seems to me I've heard of it somewhere."
2. "That's something that isn't what it's put up to be."
3. "I kind of think-well-uh-gulp."
4. "Oh, yes, it's awful technical and what not."
5. "Are you asking me?"
6. "It involves government by machinery and technicians."
7. "It's supposed to end the depression."

"We Begin"

Many writers have chosen the Puritans and Pilgrims as the central figures of their novels, but few of them have given their books the charm and vitality which Miss Carlisle has so beautifully displayed in "We Begin."

The main events of the story are not spectacular in themselves, because most of them are familiar to us in some small degree. However, the book has a uniqueness which is very noticeable. The very way in which the author tells the story is different. We find three characters who tell the succeeding events of the story as they appear to them. One is a woman, and certainly all the pathos and tenderness that a woman can experience is sensed by Anne Brewster Dexter. Her husband, John Dexter, introduces us to a type of man which was indeed desirable and in most cases representative of most of our New England forefathers. Eleazer Dexter, the brother of John, is shown to be a dominating force throughout the entire book. His fanatic religious beliefs are altogether despicable and only emphasize the evilness and immoral qualities of his own mind. Tragedy follows him wherever he goes and helpless people are caught by his dire prophesies and mean insinuations.

There are two outstanding qualities which must be attributed to Miss Carlisle's ability as a writer. Her powers of characterization are not to be slighted by the most casual reader. The people become real and vital characters for you, and their beginning which was so hard and almost impossible makes one a little more humble and gracious in realizing what suffering was endured in order to make real their ideals. Not many writers can use long passages of description with the effectiveness of this author. Many things could be said about Miss Carlisle's development of descriptive details, but suffice it to say here that the scenes of death, life, the bleakness of the ocean journey and the despair and hopelessness awaiting these people in the New Land are intensely interesting, dramatic, and powerful.

Can you imagine?"

8. "Sure. It's a new kind of machinery for typewriters."

What would be your answer?

"What? Willie's Women!"

By Evelyn L. Emerine

We've had our mid-year lecture, girls:
No leap-frog games or blissful whirls.
No stamping tramps down the corridor,
Nor gymnasts' antics across the floor.

The chattering chumps around the hall
Are due for dismissal or else for a fall.
The parlor chairs are 'on reserve'
Till the proper time, but keep your nerve
And part in peace—return again
On a week-end night till the clock strikes ten.

Never again go up the stair
With a plate of prunes and some silverware.
There's a dreadful debt from the dishes smashed
Or strayed or stolen, cracked and crashed.
New rules we've heartily indorsed—
"Now girls—these rules must be enforced."

The fire hose is not a toy—
And girls, we really must employ
Our judgment, tastes, and faculties
In lady-like activities.

So, for this week, we'll say farewell.
We'll soon have more "what?"—news to tell."

HOME EC. CLUB MEETS

The Home Economics club held its February meeting last Wednesday in 208 P. A. President Mary Liz Walker led a discussion on the plans for the Annual Home Economics party to be held in March. Marie Schmidt announced that the general theme of the affair had been selected. Other details are incomplete. It was also announced that the local club had been asked to act as host in the near future, for the Northwestern Ohio regional meeting of Home Economics clubs.

Miss Marble, of the Music department faculty, told of her student life in England last year. She described very picturesquely the "dig", or rooming house in which she lived. The English menus were compared with our own, and she also told of how the English called the American girls "the salad-girls from America." The entire talk was interspersed with humorous occurrences in her English life.

The meeting was concluded with a social gathering in the dining room where refreshments were served.

FALCONS LOSE A MOST SENSATIONAL BATTLE

Game Goes Into Third Overtime Period Before Winner Is Decided; Shupe And Shafer Star

The Student Prince athletes from Heidelberg went home with a 42-39 decision over our local basketeers, but the Falcons deserve much praise for their courageous attempt to keep the victory at home.

The many fans, who braved the sub-zero weather, were amply paid for so doing with a game that was filled with thrills from start to finish. An unusual game it was. The winner not being decided until three five minute overtime periods had elapsed.

Bee Gee drew first blood with a shot from under the basket. But Heidelberg didn't like this, and were soon out in front 7-2. The continued to be the aggressor and at the end of ten minutes of play the score was 15-7.

The Falcons then pepped up and were ahead momentarily, only to have the half end at 18 all. The second half saw the lead see-saw, first Bee Gee, then the Student Princes taking it.

With only two minutes to play the score stood 33-29 with Bee Gee leading. But then in the last minute something happened like you read about in story books, two Heidelberg men made field goals in the final seconds tying the score.

Two weary teams anxiously awaited the opening of the extra period. Bee Gee was confident and ran it up to 36, but in the closing seconds Heidelberg evened it.

The second overtime opened. Heidelberg made a field goal. Bee Gee couldn't score. But alas, Shupe scored a free throw. Heidelberg was still ahead and managed to score another free toss, making it look like a verdict of 39-37. But Mr. Shupe got two free throws and dropped them both in the net. The crowd was wild. The gun cracked the end of the second overtime, at 39 all.

That was all the scoring for Bee Gee. A group of noble warriors had fought desperately for the honor and glory of their Alma Mater. And there was honor and glory in losing such a game by 42 to 39.

Y. W. C. A. CONFERENCE

Saturday and Sunday, I, as one representative of Bowling Green State College Y. W. C. A., attended a conference at Defiance college. After dinner at the girls' dormitory there, twenty of us joined in a meeting for the discussion of the unemployment bill now before our state legislature. Some of the high points of this bill are the following:

1. Compulsory unemployment insurance would be accumulated by the employees contributing two per cent of the sum to which the wages amounted and the employees one per cent of their wages.

2. Wage earners in certain industries, excluding farm and domestic, would be eligible. A person receiving a salary of $2,000 or more would be excluded.

3. When the people become unemployed, after waiting three weeks, they can draw one-half of their weekly wage up to $15 for 16 weeks.

4. A person partly unemployed would receive some insurance if he is getting under forty per cent of his weekly wages by receiving 10 per cent of his wages each week.

5. Farm laborers, personal or domestic labor, and the laborers in interstate commerce along with occasional laborers are excluded.

Dr. Bourne of our college led the discussion of this bill. Objections to it include:

1. The employer must pay two per cent.

2. This obligation would serve as a tax and tend to drive the industry out of the state.

3. The employer might cut the wages and then pay the two per cent, or the 2 per cent might be added to the price of the product.

4. It might tend to demoralize the worker. If he were paid according to the number of children in the family, he might decide not to work. But he isn't and if work were offered to an unemployed man, he must accept it or receive no aid.

5. This unemployment insurance would not eliminate depression.

However, there are advantages to this proposed bill also:

1. This source of income in time of need would tend to aid in stabilizing industry. The former could sell his products and thus keep up his purchasing power which would in turn aid other industries.

2. The employees would try to keep the industries going to avoid depressions.

3. It would help prevent a serious depression by aiding in the start by more purchasing power at the beginning of a slump.

4. With aid for only 16 weeks, the wage earners would hunt work rather than rely on this aid.

As a group we came to the conclusion that this bill should receive immediate attention and be passed. As a result we wrote a letter to Governor White to that effect.

Sunday morning Dr. Ivans, the professor of economics and sociology at Defiance college, spoke to us. He said that a lack of interest in economics has probably brought us where we are in this depression. Unemployment has a serious effect psychologically since it brings about an undesirable state of mind in the worker. In almost all of the industries of Ohio the number of workers has decreased along with the decrease in wages. In the industry of agriculture, statistics of 584 farms reporting, in 1923 there were 4,490 persons employed while in 1931 there were 4,777 persons. The per capita earnings were $994.75 in 1923, $1027.00 in 1925, and down to $818 in 1931. These conditions in industry affect college attendance to quite an extent. Girls who are in industrial work are faced with situations like this: one girl in the month of January in 1931 worked 77 hours receiving $31, while in the same month in 1933 she worked 251 hours receiving $48.95. The wages which count are the real wages or what wages will buy. In Germany a woman desiring to buy a basket of cabbage was required to bring a basket 2½ feet high and 1½ feet wide full of the German marks to get the cabbage. We do not want our money to be lowered in value like this; we do not want an inflation of the currency if it will have such effects.

Of course we have technological unemployment which is the replacing of hand labor by machines. Thus employment today requires that the individual be better educated in order to adjust himself to new situations.

The Y. W. C. A. is trying by this means to arouse the interest of the people on our campuses in the study of the unemployment situation. This can be done by securing unemployment commission reports, reading and studying the views of our leaders on this question, and by actual trips into various communities to see the situations. This last means opens our eyes to the need for some kind of aid. Since we believe that immediate passage of the unemployment insurance bill at this time would help in the future we hope to get more people interested in urging our governor and legislature to this end, and to the fulfilling of the promises of the democratic platform.

EXCHANGE

Anyone can write modern poetry. A new order is needed; ergo it is here. We have solved the problem. It takes but one lesson, and then each may write as good poetry as his next door neighbor; nay, as good as that over which we perspire in English classes. Hundreds of Blakes, Thomsons, Crabbes, and like ilk, lurk among us all. If we need suffer the poetry of a few nauseous hacks, why don't all of us halycon souls enscribe too, then all will suffer equally. As it is now we of the mass suffer the writings of a few. What we need is mass indoctrination.

Anyone can write modern poetry. Here we are sitting at the typewriter. Let us attempt, offhand, to compose a mundane poem which shall go down in history, to those students of the future, when the taste of poetry is less infrangible. This is the formula: We have to have sex, to appeal to the mass. Evidently that is all poetry requires, for even those who can't appreciate good poetry are sexual, or so it is alleged. Therefore we see we must have a female and male; being tractable, let us introduce the female first. Drawing our brows together (good poets always do), let us imagine a female (not a sorority girl) who will appeal to the male mind, if any. Our grandfathers thought (allegedly) that men venerate sweet women, hence we write:

She was so sweet, so nice and neat,

There we have the primary elements (does a poet ever have anything else?). But we must bring to the reader's attention the fact that the girl is desirable, worth noticing. We appeal to those things fraternity men always hide:

A girl you'd love to pet.

Having now the meter and form we scan it in approved Eng. Lit. style: The lines are perfect. We have aroused the reader's desire (get it?); but for the more discerning we must put in a bit of her appearance; picture it, in other words. Let us arouse our public's protective instincts, if any.

With golden hair, a baby stare,

Now to show him she's not the fluttery type (men marry cooks, you know):

The kind you can't forget.

So ends our first tripe, pardon, we mean verse. The female is present. Enter her affinity, and sits down, with broad shoulders. His name is Ray; our heroine use to go with him; so now he's her Ex-ray. We'll have to use poetic license here:

He tipped his tile, a winsome smile,

Quick! Watson! the reaction!:

Lit up her pretty face.

One of the emending rules (when you're stuck) is to have some snappy (that word can be spelled two ways, but only one in public) conversation. We must appeal to the reader's instincts again. What would he say? Who gives a damn what the reader would say? Ain't we poets? Here it is:

He said, "Let's sit and neck a bit,

As in Hollywood (use bass voice, please) everything must be perfect. (Note to

Gum

By Evelyn L. Emerine

I'm a terrible temptation
To folks from every nation.
I am used in strong emotion
And I cause a great commotion
In the hearts and minds of teachers
Who have to turn to preachers
And scold, with faces glum,
Against the use of gum.

Stenographers and clerks,
With many facial jerks,
Get plenty of enjoyment,
But sometimes lose employment.
Still college students chew,
When they're happy, when they're blue.
And men who work in offices,
Or those who toil on farms
Are, all of them, the victims
Of my chewing gummy charms.

ODD, ISN'T IT?

That a senior (at least he should be one, considering the number of years he studied at State) is spending his valuable time at Bowling Green—and especially in a course of one of our best teachers—to air his pet theories, the latest one being that leisure time can be just as well spent in watching a prize-fight as listening to a skilled violinist. He further argues that the spectator is just as highly inspired by the display of skill the boxer shows with his lefts and rights to the jaw, as he is inspired by the music of the violinist. One might as well compare the Roman in the gladiatorial arena with the Greek in the amphitheatre.

Even if the man's theory were right, his habit of arguing is not only distasteful and obnoxious, but also futile. It is distasteful and obnoxious because his assertive and dogmatic attitude is uninfluenced by reason. This therefore makes it futile, for he proves nothing and yet takes up the class's time with his educated meandering. We extend our sympathy to the teacher in charge for her sympathetic courtesy and patient long-suffering in attempting to help this over-educated lad.

Now Johnny, don't bet on the violinist, or make a display of yourself at the prize-fight.

Midwinter Rainbow Seen Due North

Bowling Green, Ohio, (S.S.)—Unusual among meteorological phenomena, a rainbow in the northern sky was observed here by Prof. Edwin L. Moseley of Bowling Green State College.

Rainbows are seen when the sun, usually low in the sky, shines upon a curtain of raindrops opposite it in the heavens, the drops returned the split-up light to the eye of the observer by a double internal reflection. In summer the noonday sun often shines upon rain in the northern sky, but it is too high to form a rainbow. In winter the noon sun is low enough to form a bow, but if there is any water in the air it is frozen and hence unable to reflect the light properly and to break it up into the rainbow colors. It is only when a very mild winter brings rain when the sun is low enough that this unusual sight of a north-sky rainbow can be seen.

amateurs: Censors say the couple must sit down. So you see our hero is a gentleman, or a sucker). Now for the perfect location:

"Around this lovely place."

There is had verse No. 2. So far we have the characters, the place, the intent, all in perfect rhythm and meter. (Note by Milton: 'You must have the meter, even if people don't know what you're talking about.') Let us move forward ('Forward move the 600!—or has our circulation gone up?') to verse No. 3 Poets say life is not perfect ('Mister, can you spare a dime?'), hence we introduce inharmony, yet adhere to the main theme. How shall we do it?:

Now this here Miss received no kiss,

Ah! That's it. Imagine the thoughts of the maiden! (No you're wrong; she isn't a co-ed):

Was this guy hypnotised?

Obviously she's worried. What would you do? So does she:

At last she spoke, "Say, Old Poke,

We can tell by her tones she's getting disgusted. We must put beautiful words in her mouth, for she typifies the female, and of course all women are perfect—in poetry. Continuing:

"What are you, paralysed?"

Verse No. 3 is finished in its designated meter. There is even more humanness (you must have it, you know, it's catching) in this verse than before: The working out of passionate, virile human emotions, swept on a flood tide down to the vibrant arms of Love's enchantment (in six volumes, but who opened the can?) The climax is approaching (no, you can't smell it yet); and there sit the hero and heroine cast in Life's spell, breathlessly awaiting—what? All we need now is the smashing climax (It ain't toothache, it's Climax). Let us beget one that will be hard to equal, one that will descend onto suffering English students thru the ages. Now that we are all anxious, let us hear the hero's rebuttal, his explanation. But not too soon (remember you get paid by the line); we shall lead up to it, then plunge in with a crash:

"Now listen, Sis," she heard him hiss,

The reason! All our readers are breathless, waiting. Since readers of good poetry are scarce, let us save them from strangulation. What shall we say? (Not that it matters; you can follow Milton's style: Put down the first big word you find in the Thesaurus and stick in a few humdingers). Here we go:

"Just now I took a chew,

There is the smashing, scintillating climax! What a climax! (If we don't praise it, who will?) Doubtless the readers are exhausted, but for those other badauds and for the poem itself we must add one more explanative line:

"A hefty slug of fine-cut plug,

Good poetry (to sell) must end happily. Other alleged poets say human can't stand reality. We add the finishing line:

"I'll kiss you when I'm through!"

That ends our poem. We still have the meter and form in ne plus ultra order. Too, we have written a poem of the basic emotions which will leave a soul cicatrix (or an ache in the visceral cavity); a poem which Appeals, it is alleged. As we said in the beginning, anyone can write poetry. At least you can do no worse than the rest of the incompetents. After reading other poets, we stand for mass production.

For the benefit of those who tuned in late on this broadcast we repeat the poem in full:

*She was so sweet, so nice and neat,
A girl you'd love to pet.
With golden hair, a baby stare,
The kind you can't forget.*

*He tipped his tile, a winsome smile,
Lit up her pretty face.
He said, "Let's sit and neck a bit,
Around this lovely place."*

*Now this here Miss received no kiss,
Was this guy hypnotised?
At last she spoke, "Say, Old Poke,
What are you, paralysed?"*

*"Now listen, Siss," she heard him hiss,
"Just now I took a chew,
"A hefty slug of fine-cut plug,
"I'll kiss you when I'm through!"*

From a Dormitory Window

President Williams goes to work every morning at a minute of eight.

A few music students are the earliest birds on the campus. (But the worms are all frozen anyhow, so why bother?)

The varied expressions of people carrying those little 5x6½ slips of white paper last Wednesday were—well, if you carried one you know all about it!

Last winter's wool dresses, year before lasts fur coats, year before that's stocking caps, and wool socks (?) had quite a coming out party last Thursday. Let's get the weatherman and the haberdasher to cooperate.

Some people are always in a hurry—and some aren't!

There's a grand dash to the library between 7:58 and 8:02 A. M. Those costly two minutes! (Two bits, please!)

The snow blowing around the campus lights is a pleasing sight—if you're on the inside looking out.
